

Adrienn Szilágyi (PhD 2016) wrote her doctoral thesis on the analysis of the social and economic relations of the aristocratic and noble families in the 19th-century Békés County (forthcoming monograph in 2018). She was researcher at Arts and Scholarship in the Service of the Nation-building in the Nineteenth-Century Hungary (NKFI project) at HAS RCH Institute of History (2013-17). She is postdoctoral researcher doing her own project Social network and informal structures within the estates in 19th century (NKFI project) from September 2018, which focuses on the estate and its employees, the relations between aristocracy and nobles, individuals and communities, and the family as a social, economic and emotional community. In the research team she is responsible for the development of a family reconstruction database cutting across centuries and social groups. She aims to create a searchable, expandable, researchable historical data structure with her colleagues, which helps to understand the structure, relationships, and strategies of families, while responding to other historical problems as well.
